

Option 1

This concept with the combined design it's supposed to be a mix of both the Muscogee and Santee designs incorporated into a totem pole-like design, this is seen with the patterns made with the outstretched parakeet wings draped over the back of the fox head.

The OBV design and blank background is a nod to Santee's flaps.

Option 2

The standard flap features a design that is both complementary and unique from the OBV below. The standard design features a daytime scene with the Red Fox and Carolina Parakeet posed together as if to state that they "have each other's back" in recognition of the formal joining of our two lodges. The red and black double border is emblematic of the legacy Santee flaps of old, while the colorful landscape is a nod to the attractive designs of legacy Muscogee's past.

The Ordeal flap features a scene from the chapel at Camp Barstow. The sun is seen rising, symbolizing the dawn of a new morning. Our Ordeal members are beginning their journey in the Order, so the flap appropriately features a rising sun and a single arrow at the top.

The Brotherhood flap is distinguished by a scene from the island at Camp Coker. The sun is setting in the sky, as if in the evening, symbolic of a Brotherhood member's experience and tenure in the Order. This flap adds two bars, one to each end of the arrow symbolizing the sealing of one's Brotherhood membership.

The Vigil flap features the Red Fox and Carolina Parakeet joined together at a single fire, bonding together in fellowship. The scene is set during the night, when a brother is transformed into a Vigil Honor member. The fire lay is set in the form of a triangle, representative of the Vigil triangle,

Option 3

This patch was heavily inspired by both Muscogee Lodge's S19a Flap designed by Justin Ferrick, and the 70th Anniversary S41 Flap designed by Matthew Clapp. This design combines the landscapes of both flaps, and uses the fox from the S41. The Parakeet was drawn by the designer, and is the same one that is in the originally approved design of the 2023 Muscogee Lodge 116 Winter Banquet Patch. This flap pays homage to two great legacy Muscogee Flaps, while including a parakeet similar to existing legacy Santee patches (ex: using the same color scheme). The poses of the totems represents the joining of the two lodges, as the Parakeet flies downward to meet the fox on the ground, and the fox jumps to meet the parakeet in the air.
